

From Maine to Mexico, in all 50 states, hitting it hard for six years, the Durocher Family, from Cohasset Minnesota, is a full time touring band that doesn't miss a beat. With 12 children, including seven girls and five boys, they have a lot of homegrown talent. They play an eclectic mix of folk, contemporary newgrass, classi-pop, and do original music as well as popular covers. Paul, father of the group told us, "With six college age kids on board we really connect with young people, but our music really has a universal appeal to all ages. "We play music mostly in worship centers, but also in performing arts centers, prisons, fairs and music festivals, and various outdoor venues as well."

The Durochers have been really well received from urban areas like downtown Los Angeles to rural towns, from New England and the east coast to San Diego, Hawaii, and Alaska.

When it comes to family, the Durochers do it big time and seem to have a lot of fun. Paul told us "Families today are struggling and there are lots of pressures on the family today from everything from social media to financial issues. If we can pull it off anyone can. Being a family can be a very fun filled and rewarding experience -- as it should be."

The Durochers will be performing at _____ and doors open at _____. There is no charge for the event and a free will offering will be received.
